

Calling All Gardeners: An L.A. Bungalow With Bountiful Outdoor Space Is Ripe for the Picking

Dating back to the 1890s, the $899K residence features raised planting beds, a sprawling backyard, and breathtaking city views.

Text by Kathryn M.

Location: 2919 Johnston Street, Los Angeles, California

Price: $899,000

Year Built: 1890

Footprint: 1,365 square feet (two bedrooms, two baths)

Lot Size: 15,071 square feet

"In happening Lincoln Heights, this rustic-modern bungalow on a sprawling lot embodies the urban homesteader's dream of exquisite design, tranquil surroundings, and breathtaking views. The 1890 residence has been stylishly reconfigured, bringing a pared-back and distinctly elegant flair to heritage elements that include wood flooring, vaulted ceilings, and exposed beams. Skylights bring all-day sunshine, and you'll love the front sitting porch where the cityscape panorama will amaze. This home can be effectively separated into a pair of one-bed and one-bath units—an ideal arrangement for hosting guests."

Large skylights and windows invite ample natural light inside.

A peek at the freestanding sauna perched atop the gentle hillside lot.

<https://www.dwell.com/article/rustic-modern-bungalow-lincoln-heights-los-angeles-real-estate-76606646>