Price: $1.149 million

This storybook-like yellow and blue casita, adorned with whimsical touches, is a little charmer.

“It really punches above its weight,” said listing agent Tracy Do of Coldwell Banker Realty. “It isn’t very large, but natural light is plentiful, and the outdoors is always just a few steps away.”

The grounds, including the lushly planted yard, make the house feel magical, she said, adding that the home, which is in a cul-de-sac, is close to all the amenities of the city.

“Everything you need for your daily routine is nearby, including coffee, dining, markets and some of L.A.’s best hiking trails,” she said.

The interiors of the casita, which were updated by previous owners, “feel breezy and unfussy, with a timeless quality that makes you feel comfortable and right at home,” Do said.

Previous owners updated the interiors of the casita.

Amenities

The home is arranged in an open layout. The bedrooms open to the outdoors, and there is a balcony—a plus for taking in the views in Echo Park, which is mostly hills and canyons.

The primary suite has a walk-in closet, and the kitchen has a Viking range.

“The covered rear deck is the perfect spot for morning coffee or an evening glass of wine,” Do said.

There is also a laundry room and driveway parking.

The detached studio, which is air-conditioned, originally had been a one-car garage. “It offers versatility as a space for work, creative pursuits, a home gym or simply a place to chill,” Do said.

Neighborhood Notes

Echo Park, which borders Silver Lake and Chinatown, is home to Dodger Stadium, fine-dining spots and taco trucks.

“If any neighborhood says, ‘Welcome to L.A.,’ it’s Echo Park,” Do said. “Among our city’s oldest enclaves, it is rich with history that includes immigrants, artists and some of Hollywood’s earliest studio back lots, where Charlie Chaplin made silent-movie magic.”

She added that Echo Park, “a sunny, eclectic and very friendly neighborhood,” offers a diverse mix of celebrities, families and cultures “that can only happen in L.A.”

This Scottish castle has hit the market.

SAVILLS

At the northern tip of the Isle of Mull, off the west coast of Scotland, a sprawling waterfront castle has come to market asking for offers over £9 million (US$12.1 million).

Known as Glengorm Estate, the property spans roughly 3,702 acres with more than 3 miles of Atlantic Ocean frontage. Across its sprawling footprint is the kind of rugged natural beauty that Scotland is famous for, from rolling hills, pasture and woodland to rocky headlands, lochs and secluded bays.

“Glengorm is a truly exceptional Scottish estate, combining one of the finest Baronial castles on the west coast with dramatic Atlantic frontage, significant acreage and a diverse, well-established income base,” said Luke French, director at Savills Rural.

The estate comprises a portfolio of 17 buildings, including a combination of long- and short-term rentals, according to Savills, which announced the listing of the property on Thursday.

The heart of Glengorm though, is its 18-bedroom fortress.

The castle dates to 1860.

Savills

Built in 1860 from locally quarried granite, Glengorm Castle as its aptly named, has turrets, ornate gables, crenellated rooflines and biblical inscriptions carved into the exterior.

Inside, there are plenty of character-laden features, like the grand fireplaces, stately wooden staircase and wood-paneled walls in the drawing room, formal dining room, library, a study and entrance hall.

All of the main reception rooms take advantage of the dramatic views across the estate and ocean.

Glengorm has reportedly been in the hands of the same family since the 1970s.

The estate is home to a herd of Highland cattle.

Agriculture is a cornerstone of the estate's heritage. A herd of Highland cattle known as the Glengorm Fold has been part of the property for over 170 years, according to Savills. There's also a flock of Scottish Blackface sheep. Sporting and leisure pursuits are plentiful, too, with red deer stalking, and both sea and loch fishing.

"Opportunities of this caliber, where historic architecture, environmental importance, lifestyle appeal and commercial resilience come together so cohesively, are extraordinarily rare," French said. "We anticipate strong interest from across the globe for this very special property."
